

Black

Overview

Black is a color that results from the absence or complete absorption of visible light. It is an achromatic color, without hue, like white and grey. It is often used symbolically or figuratively to represent darkness. Black and white have often been used to describe opposites such as good and evil, the living versus the dead, and light versus dark. Since the 19th century, black has been the symbolic color of solemnity and authority, and for this reason it is still commonly used in many contexts.

What is Mars Black?

Mars black is a black pigment made of synthetic iron oxides. It is commonly used in water-colors and oil painting. It takes its name from Mars, the god of war and patron of iron. Good-quality black dyes were not known until the middle of the 14th century.

What is a black pigment?

Black can be defined as the visual impression (or color) experienced when no visible light reaches the eye. Pigments or dyes that absorb light rather than reflect it back to the eye look black. A black pigment can, however, result from a combination of several pigments that collectively absorb all wavelengths of visible light.
