§ 200.324 Contract cost and price. (a) The recipient or subrecipient must perform a cost or price analysis for every procurement transaction, including contract modifications, in excess of the simplified acquisition threshold.

(a) The recipient or subrecipient must perform a cost or price analysis for every procurement transaction, including contract modifications, in excess of the simplified acquisition threshold. The method and degree of analysis conducted depend on the facts surrounding the particular procurement.

(7) The Air Force Institute of Technology (AFIT) and the Federal Acquisition Institute (FAI) jointly prepared a five-volume set of Contract Pricing Reference Guides to guide pricing and negotiation personnel. The five guides are: I Price Analysis, II Quantitative Techniques for Contract Pricing.

Government contracting is one of the few exceptions. In the commercial marketplace, prices are determined primarily by supply and demand. A seller's cost influences the price it will be willing to accept for its products and services. However, parties rarely negotiate price based on the seller's.

Most industries in the United States are not subject to cost and pricing regulations. Government contracting is one of the few exceptions. In the commercial marketplace, prices are determined primarily by supply and demand. A seller's cost influences the price it will be willing to accept for its products and services.

What is government procurement?

In the United States, the processes of government procurement enable federal, state and local government bodies in the country to acquire goods, services (including construction), and interests in real property.

What is a federal government procurement contract?

Contracts for federal government procurement usually involve appropriated funds spent on supplies, services, and interests in real property by and for the use of the Federal Government through purchase or lease, whether the supplies, services, or interests are already in existence or must be created, developed, demonstrated, and evaluated.

Does the government negotiate price based on cost?

When parties negotiate price based on cost or enter into flexibly priced contracts, they require a common understanding of what cost or pricing data the seller is required to disclose, which costs the buyer is willing to pay, and how those costs will be measured and allocated to contracts. The Government typically does not negotiate these terms.

How can government procurement be analysed?

One approach to analysing government procurement of large systems such as weapons systems is to use real options analysis. Such procurements can be done in single annual lots ("single-year procurements" or SYPs), or, with Congressional approval, multi-year procurement (MYP) contracts.

How are government contracts different?

Government contracts are different. The Government buys many products and services for which a commercial marketplace does not exist. Without adequate price competition, the Government requires cost and pricing data to determine whether a seller's price is fair and reasonable.
