

Limited company buying sole trader

Overview

What is the difference between a sole trader and a limited company?

The main difference between a sole trader and a limited company is the legal structure. Sole traders are self-employed individuals, who are the sole person in their business. As a sole trader, you have total control over any business assets and profits. This also means you are personally liable for all the debts of the business.

When should a sole trader form a limited company?

Sole traders are taxed on the profits or losses of the sole trade personally, regardless of what profits they physically withdraw from their business bank account. Consequently, when the business is doing well, and you can afford to leave some of the profits in the business, it may be time for you to form a limited company.

Should I start a sole trader or a limited liability company?

Most business owners opt for a sole trader organisation when they begin as it is easier to set up and has a lower administrative burden. As a limited liability company, you and your business are separate legal entities. This means your business exists on its own.

Why should a sole trader not work with a limited company?

Less credibility: Some organisations choose to not work with sole traders due to the lack of legal protection compared to limited companies. No protection over your business name: Unlike limited companies, your business name is not protected. This means anyone can trade under the same name as you which could cause confusion.

How many people can own a sole trader business?

Only one person can own and operate a sole trader business, the clue is in the name: 'sole'. Most business owners opt for a sole trader organisation when they begin as it is easier to set up and has a lower administrative burden. As a limited liability company, you and your business are separate legal entities.

Is a sole trader a business owner?

According to the law, a sole trader and a business owner are the same entity. Any liabilities are the owner's legal responsibility. When the business is unable to pay a creditor, the creditor can take away assets. The same happens when another company or person sues the business.
