What is a purlin through hole clamp?

Bottom access, Purlin Through Hole clamps are Type 304 Stainless steel for higher strength and durability. The clamp allows for direct PV module mounting to purlins and other structural members. The patented pre-assembled clamps eliminate handling small parts on the job site and provide for a faster installation.

Can a purlin be connected through a flange?

ESS CONNECTIONS Fixing of purlins through the bottom flange of the purlin (cleatless connection) is used in some forms of construction. The purlin capacity tables should not be used for these types of connections. For these types of connections there are other design issues (both strength and serviceability) and construction issues that need to be addressed.

What is the bolt strength of a roof purlin?

The bolt strength grade (4.6 or 8.8) should be specified by the design engineer to conform with the Stramit® Purlins, Girts & Bridging – Product Technical Manual. Loads to be suspended from roof purlins must be accounted for in design. No allowance is included in the capacity tables.

What is a purlin system?

purlin system. The model considers both in-plane distribution of axial force, shear force and bending moments, as well as out of plane at the laps; there is minor axis translation and twisting restraint at the fixing points; there is lateral stability in the plane of the roof at internal supports and the ends of.

What bolts do I need for a purlin?

Normally M12 bolts are required for purlins between 100 and 250, whilst M16 bolts are needed for 300 and 350 purlins. Each bolt requires integral washers. The bolt strength grade (4.6 or 8.8) should be specified by the design engineer.

engineer to conform with the Stramit® Purlins, Girts & Bridging – Product Technical Manual.

What are bridging and purlin accessories made of?

Bridging and Purlin accessories are manufactured from steel with a minimum yield of 300 MPa and galvanised coating of Z275 or zinc aluminium alloy AZ150 coating. Other coatings, grades and materials may be available, subject to inquiry. Maintaining the correct specification of purlins, girts and bridging is very important.
