

Solar bracket anti-pulling test

Overview

Can a solar bracket/hook be climbed on?

the load being considered is the combined static weight/load of the solar mounting system, solar panels, and snow. Manufacturers of brackets/hooks designed to evenly distribute such a load must make it clear in their installation instructions that the bracket/hook must not be climbed on or used as a means of support by installers.

What is a tensile pull test?

Tensile Pull Test (Load Parallel-to-Mounting Surface of S-5! Bracket) for Snow Guards This testing involves pulling the S-5! product along the seam to demonstrate drag load. (Click through the tabs below for further explanation.).

How do I test S-5 brackets?

This testing involves pulling the S-5! product along the seam to demonstrate drag load. (Click through the tabs below for further explanation.) This test protocol outlines methods of testing S-5 brackets that are designed for panel sheeting only attachment or S-5 brackets that are designed for composite assemblies.

How many joints should be tested in a solar system?

The test specimen shall include at least one of every type of joint between it and the surrounding roof surface (where appropriate). In some cases, with large solar systems, it might not be possible to test all of the joints simultaneously in the same test. In such cases the testing shall be repeated to ensure that each joint is fully tested.

What is a good load value for a solar mounting system?

a load value no less than 1.0kN/m² (See Note (ii)) for a mounting system. Where testing an individual roof bracket/hook then the load value shall be no less than 0.25kN. the load being considered is the combined static weight/load of the solar mounting system, solar panels, and snow.

What is a pull test?

A pull test uses a strain gauge to measure vertical and lateral resistance up to the forces required by the PV support structure engineer's calculations for wind and snow load requirements.
