Overview

There are many reasons for clothes to smell after being in storage. The location itself is a factor. Do you store your off-season items in a storage unit, in an attic or basement, or in a seldom-used closet?

Climate is another factor. Is your storage space climate controlled, temperature controlled, or neither?

Climate even.

Regardless of why your clothes tend to smell musty, there are ways to prevent it from happening. Here are 10 ways to keep clothes fresh in storage bins, closets, drawers, and storage units: .

Follow these recommendations, and your clothing should smell good while in storage. But it's likely you will still want to freshen up everything when you take items out of storage. Here are some tips: 1. Air out everything that.

How do you keep clothes smelling fresh in closet storage?

Here's how to keep clothes smelling fresh in closet storage: Hang a piece of tissue paper sprayed with your favourite eau de toilette in between your clothes. This will infuse your clothing with the scent and keep your threads smelling great. Coffee grounds are great for absorbing bad odours.

How do you keep clothes smelling good?

Keeping clothes in closets smelling good involves making sure the clothes going in are as clean as possible, and there is enough air flowing through spaces. Whether it's keeping closets clean and organized or using essential oils and a dehumidifier, it's possible to keep odors and musty smells at bay.

How can I prevent smells from forming in my storage?

The best way to prevent smells from forming in your storage is to deodorize it. No matter what type of storage you're using, be it a closet or a box, deodorizing works because it removes all smells. You can start by taking out any clothes that are still inside.

How do you make a closet smell good?

To make a closet smell good, think about what you're putting into your closets that are creating any odors and how you can keep the air flowing. Mold and mildew are also common causes of a smelly closet. Similar to when you take a whiff of an old bath towel, and it just smells off, clothes in your closet may have a musty, earthy smell.

How to avoid foul smelling clothes?

One of the best ways to avoid foul-smelling clothes is to use high-quality laundry detergent. Using a laundry conditioner helps give your clothes a nice fragrance too. But that's not always enough. Sometimes, washing your clothes all the time won't help, so you need to address the lingering smell in your storage.

How do you stop clothes from smelling musty in drawers?

To stop clothes from smelling musty in drawers, deodorize the container first. Start by cleaning the airtight container, box, closet, or attic from top to bottom. Make sure you remove items already in the container. Then, use a vacuum to remove the dust and dirt, and wipe down the container with an odor-neutralizer.
