

Will insurance cover damage to photovoltaic panels

Overview

Does a solar insurance policy cover accidental damage?

While standard policies may cover various risks, they might not include accidental damage to solar panels. To safeguard against such incidents, accidental damage cover can be added to your policy for an additional fee, providing extra protection for your solar panels.

Does home insurance cover rooftop solar panels?

Most home insurance policies cover rooftop solar panels under buildings insurance, though this will only cover you for a limited number of potential events. These won't usually include wear and tear, accidental damage, or downtime cover.

Will solar panels change my home insurance cover?

But having panels fitted is a major change to your home and could change your home insurance cover. The best thing to do is contact your existing provider and let them know that you plan to install solar panels. They can tell you whether your policy covers solar panels already.

Will my insurance cover a photovoltaic system?

Contact your insurer and ask whether your policy includes a photovoltaic system, preferably before you have the panels installed. Even if you're absolutely sure you'll be covered, you still need to notify your insurer.

Do I need insurance if I install solar panels?

Yes, you should always let your insurance provider know about any significant changes you make to your home – including fitting solar panels – to ensure you're sufficiently covered. As well as improving your home's market value, installing solar panels is likely to increase your home's rebuild value.

Are solar panels included in buildings insurance?

Most providers include solar panels in buildings insurance, treating them as part of the fabric of your home, just like the doors, floors, and walls. However, these policies can be insufficiently comprehensive, unless you pay extra. This means you can often attain a better level of cover if you get solar panel insurance separately.
